table

The table component. A markdown pipe table that owns its slide — with a row capacity, autosplit, the portrait card reshape, focus axes, and every switch the universal table layer offers.

THE DEFAULT

It hugs its rows and centers the block.

A three-row table reads as three rows, not three rows stretched over a screen. The table spans the stage horizontally; the vertical size comes from the content.

TABLE-FILL

`table-fill` takes the leftover height.

The rows spread to use the stage, and each cell centers in its band — the pairing the old stretch geometry always lacked.

The hairlines carry the rhythm alone. Independent of `table-fill` — the two combine.

ROW LABELS · MEASURED

The first column reads as a label, when it is one.

Nothing was declared here. The rule looks at the column and turns the emphasis on because these are names, not data.

ROW LABELS · DECLINED

A year column is not a set of labels.

The same rule, the same slide class, the opposite answer — an all-numeric first column is data, so it keeps the body weight and your own `bold` still shows.

YEAR	REVENUE	GROWTH
2024	$4.2M	+21%
2025	$5.1M	+19%
2026	$6.4M	+25%

WITH-ROW-LABEL

`with-row-label` overrules the measurement.

Same data as the slide before. You always have the last word — and `no-row-label` turns it off over a column the rule would have emphasized.

YEAR	REVENUE	GROWTH
2024	$4.2M	+21%
2025	$5.1M	+19%

NO-ROW-LABEL

The rule would emphasize these names. Turning it off returns the first column to body weight — and to your own `bold`, which the emphasis would otherwise swallow, since it sets the same weight and ink.

STATE-CELLS

`state-cells` changes what a cell means.

`[x]` `[-]` `[!]` become the drawn status disc — distinct by shape, not only hue, so it survives grayscale and a color-blind reader. Never a typed check.

RAW HTML

A table written as HTML still gets the treatment.

Markdown hands raw HTML through untouched, so the rule never sees these rows. The slide falls back to emphasizing the first column.

REGION	Q3	Q4
North America	$4.2M	$5.1M
EMEA	$3.8M	$3.9M
APAC	$1.9M	$2.6M

TABLE · THE COMPONENT

The same table in the drawn hand.

Frame and row rules become seeded rough.js strokes; the type becomes handwriting. Nothing about the markdown changes.

DARK

Palette-blind, so dark is a token swap.

Zebra, hairlines and row-label ink all resolve from the theme. No rule in this component names a color.

COMPACT

Six rows, tightened.

Capacity is about four rows and crowds past six. `compact` buys some of that back; past six, split the table across slides.
