Feature demo · closing index split

A long see-also list keeps every row.

On a phone, a closing's see-also list that does not fit becomes a cover and its rows. A closing of one line stays one slide.

Ship the plan on Monday.

The board signs off on Friday.

`docs` — the component catalog

`gallery` — every layout, light and dark

`studio` — compose a deck in the browser

`progress` — percent complete with a status verdict, and a note on each row that a bullet has no room for

`bar` — magnitudes compared against each other rather than against a plan or a target

`big-number` — one figure against its target is the whole slide, and nothing else competes with it

`stats` — a row of independent headline metrics that share no common scale or baseline

`gantt` — the rows are time-bound work with owners and dates, not measures against a threshold

Nothing is cut, and the short close stays one slide.
