Feature · Full-bleed ink

Words that read over any photo

A full-bleed slide picks its ink from the photo behind it

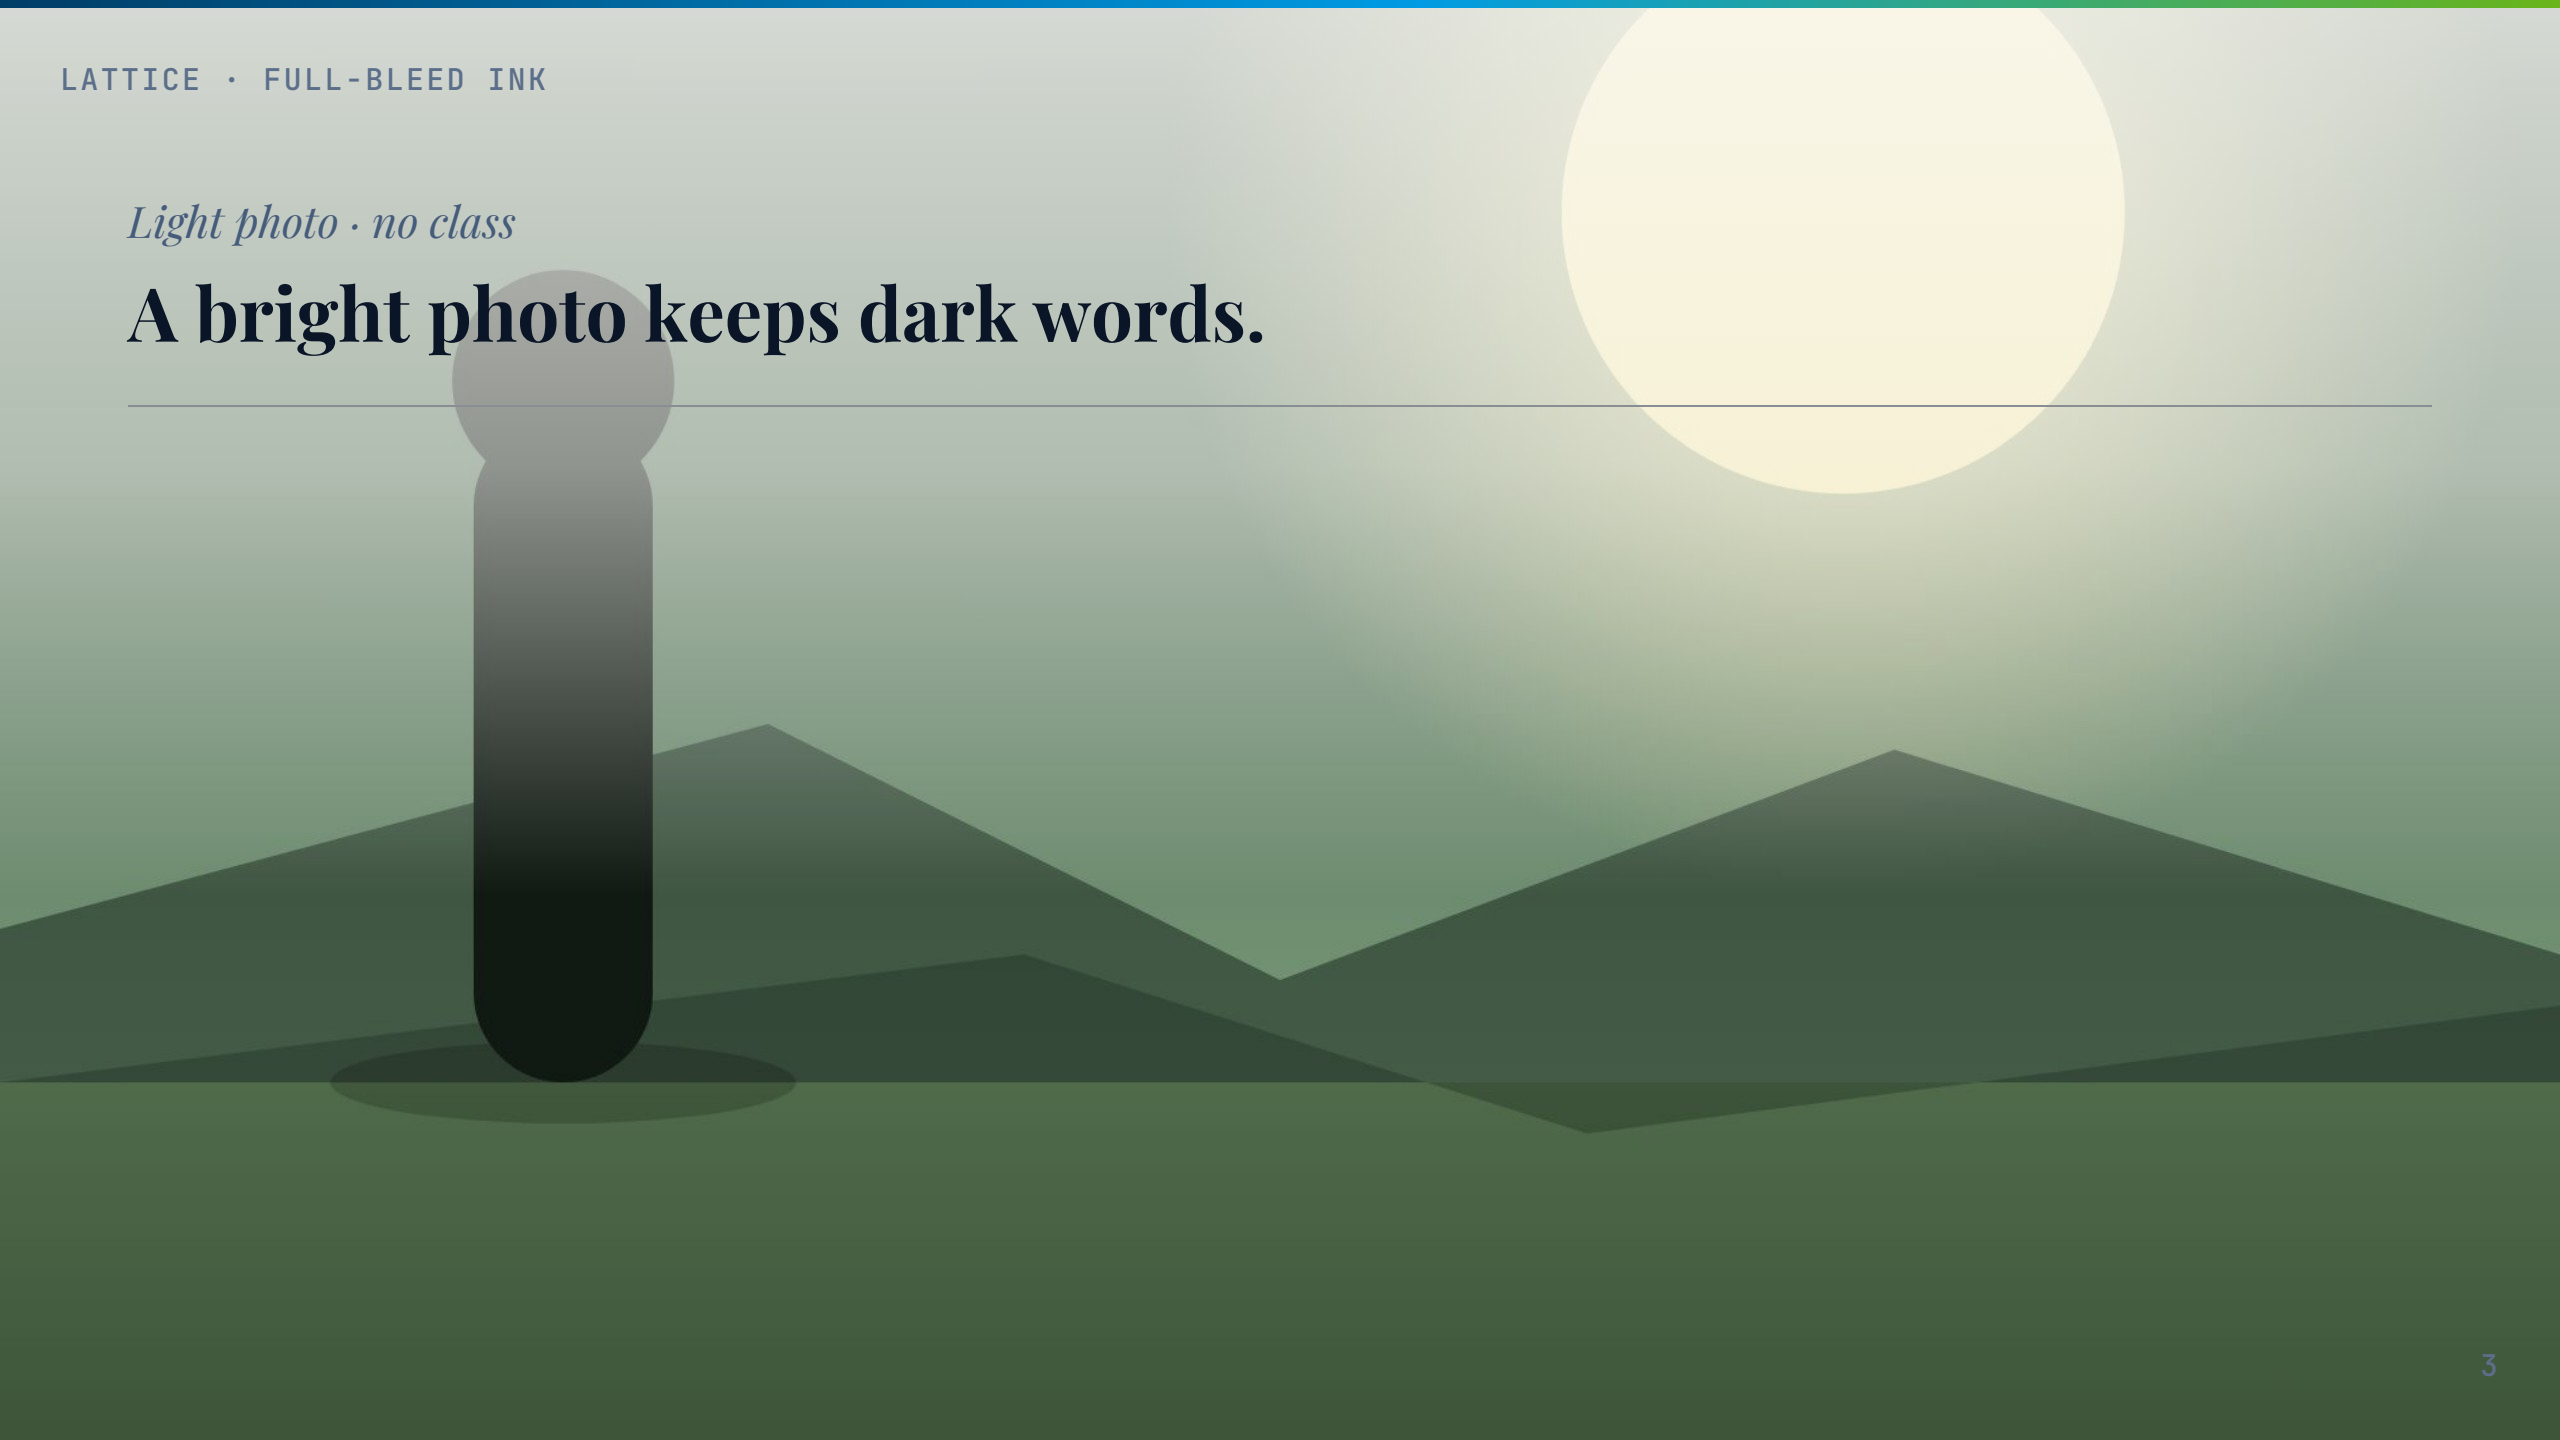

Dark photo · no class

A dusk photo takes white words.

Light photo · no class

A bright photo keeps dark words.

The record

The record reads its photo the same way.

The author decides

A slide that names its mode keeps it.

Where it looks

Only the band under the heading counts.

The ink is chosen for where the words sit: the top of the photo, cropped as the slide crops it.

Every export makes the same choice.

- The PDF, the picture export and the HTML read the photo before the page renders.
- The Studio and the Playground read it in the preview.
- An Export-to-Marp bundle carries the choice in the slide's class.