Feature demo · Guide

A pointer that says more than "over there."

Turn Guide on in Present and read this deck. Each slide is a different shape, and the hand changes what it does to suit it.

The vocabulary

Five gestures, chosen by what the thing is before how big it is.

01 Underline

One wide, short line of prose. The workhorse, and it lives in the descender gap.

02 Ring

A substantial handle: a rail disc, an index, a compact stat.

03 Wash

A phrase inside a longer block, named without naming the block.

04 Bracket

A block with no boundary of its own, read several lines at a time.

05 Tap

Something small and discrete, where a ring would be mostly empty space.

The bullet, not the line

A list item is named by its bullet.

Attention spreads across a whole object once any part of it is cued, so the marker delivers the line — and a bullet is a place the eye can land, which a full-width box is not.

- Renewal-risk signals clustered at the segment ceiling.
- Legal review surfaced as the pipeline chokepoint.
- Displacement pressure concentrated in one tier.

The value, not the card

A figure is named by the number, not by the panel around it.

Each card has a border already. A second outline would be a duplicate boundary.

92.1%
CUES RESOLVE TO A TARGET

5,879
CUES MEASURED

126
DECKS SWEPT

14.1%
OF GESTURES DRAW A BOX

Wash

A paragraph read a clause at a time gets a highlighter, not a circle.

Growth held across every region. Spend stayed disciplined through the second half. The quarter landed on plan with room to spare. Each of those sentences is a phrase inside this block, so the hand washes the words being spoken rather than naming the whole paragraph four times over.

The header, not the card

A card with a title is named by its title.

Rests, then moves

The gesture fires on a new block, never on a full stop.

Names a handle

The smallest visual token that stands for the whole thing.

Clears the words

The pointer rides the stroke, so it stops outside what it named.

The rail disc

A stage on a rail is named by its node.

Pilot

One region, two teams, one connector.

Expand

Legal review folds into intake.

General

The support rota stands up.

Calibrate

The weights get their first audit.

TWO BLOCKS, ONE SENTENCE

The first bullet of an option used to get nothing at all.

Its narration joins the option's label to its first fact, and no single element contains both.

BUILD EVERYTHING

- Owns the plumbing and the scoring alike
- Two engineer-quarters before anyone scores a signal

BUY THE PLUMBING

- Connectors ship in six weeks
- Engineering stays on the part that thinks

RECOMMENDATION

Buy the plumbing. Build the framework. Revisit at the calibration review.

Where the deck declares focus, Guide names that row instead.

CRITERION	BEFORE	AFTER
Moves per cue	every one	block only
Verbs	one	five
Placement	searched	derived
Emphasis	none	`_focus:`

Read it with Guide on

The hand should fit what it is naming.

Nothing here is authored for Guide. Every gesture on these slides is chosen from the structure the deck already has.