New component · comparison · grid · structure

Plans, priced, with one to pick.

The plans / packages slide every commercial, membership, and procurement deck needs — tiers compared on price and features, with one column elevated as the recommendation. The recommended tier is marked explicitly, because it is usually the middle one.

One grid, three industries' "which one?" slide.

A pricing table is the same shape whether you sell software, ask for a donation, or respond to an RFP: named tiers, a price, a feature checklist, and a nudge toward one of them.

- Mark the recommendation with `Most popular` (or `Best value`, `Recommended`) — it becomes a ribbon and elevates the card.
- `[x]` is included, `[/]` is not (muted, struck through), `[-]` is limited. Keep the feature list identical across tiers so the columns scan.

Pick the plan that fits the team.

Make the choice obvious.

Same features, same order, every tier — then elevate exactly one. The grid does the comparing; the ribbon does the recommending.
