More than four tiers

Five-plus columns shrink below readability and the price comparison collapses. Curate to the tiers that matter, or use `table` for a dense feature-by-plan matrix.

Every tier marked popular

Elevate exactly one tier. Two ribbons cancel out and the eye has nowhere to land — the whole point of the marker is a single recommendation.

Features that drift between tiers

If each tier lists a different set of features, the columns can't be compared row-for-row. Keep the feature list and order identical; toggle inclusion with `[x]` / `[/]`.

An open ring for a feature the tier lacks

Use `[/]` (muted, struck through) for a feature your own tier leaves out. `[ ]` is an open ring — it reads 'not yet', which promises the feature is coming — and `[!]` is the red cross, which reads as a failure. Save `[!]` for a competitor's column.
