inventory

A parallel set of related items of similar weight — one content shape, four interchangeable looks.

inventory · the parts ledger

The inventory lists a system's parts.

01 One part per row.
A name and one clause of body.

02 Four parts reads best.
Five fits, and five is the ceiling.

03 Bodies stay clauses.
Fourteen words soft, twenty-two hard.

04 Looks reskin the list.
cards, timeline, editorial change form, not content.

inventory cards

cards deals the parts into tiles.

One part per row.

> The sidebar carries the register's one takeaway.

One part per row.

A name and one clause of body.

Four parts reads best.

Five fits, and five is the ceiling.

Bodies stay clauses.

Fourteen words soft, twenty-two hard.

Looks reskin the list.

Same content, magazine form.

The ledger clips past five full rows.

01 Part one.

Bodies stay short when the count is maxed.

02 Part two.

Matched shapes keep five rows scannable.

03 Part three.

The middle rows forgive the least.

04 Part four.

The sweet spot ended here.

05 Part five.

The last row that seats whole — a sixth would clip its body.

When NOT to reach for inventory.

More than five items

Past five rows at 16:9 the looks lose scannability (cards and timeline past four). Escalate to list-tabular or split across slides.

Ordered steps

If sequence carries meaning, use list-steps or `list takeaway numbered`. inventory entries are parallel, of similar weight.

When NOT to reach for inventory.

Nested-bullet authoring inventory takes an inline bold lead (`- Lead. detail`), not the nested `- Title` / `- body` shape that card-style components use.

Lopsided density

Equalize the prose when one entry has three sentences and the rest have one — uneven density unbalances every look.
