Mermaid labels fit their boxes

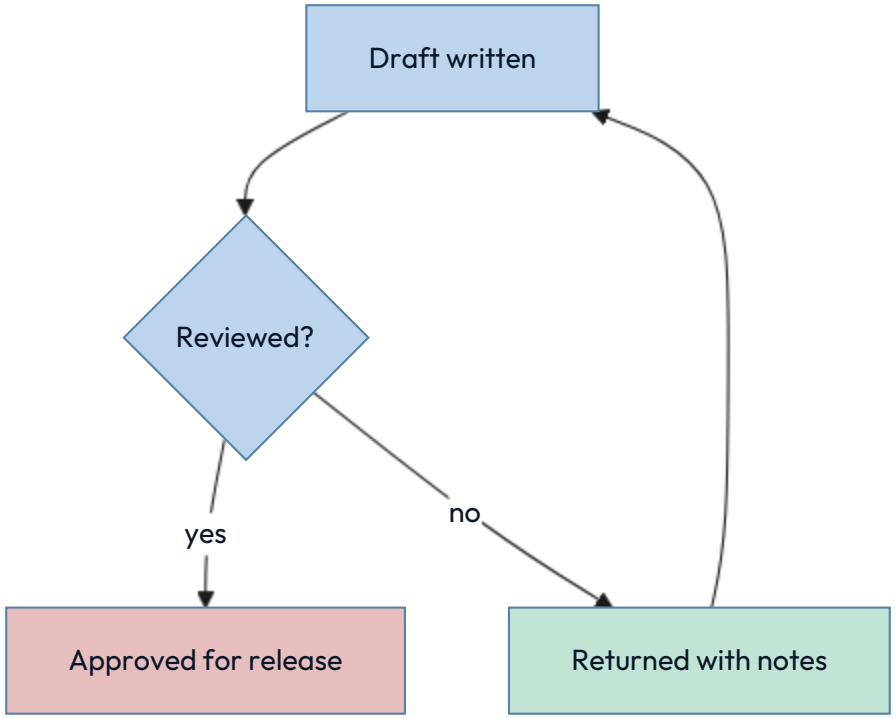

A diagram on a plain slide no longer takes the slide's paragraph size

How an order moves

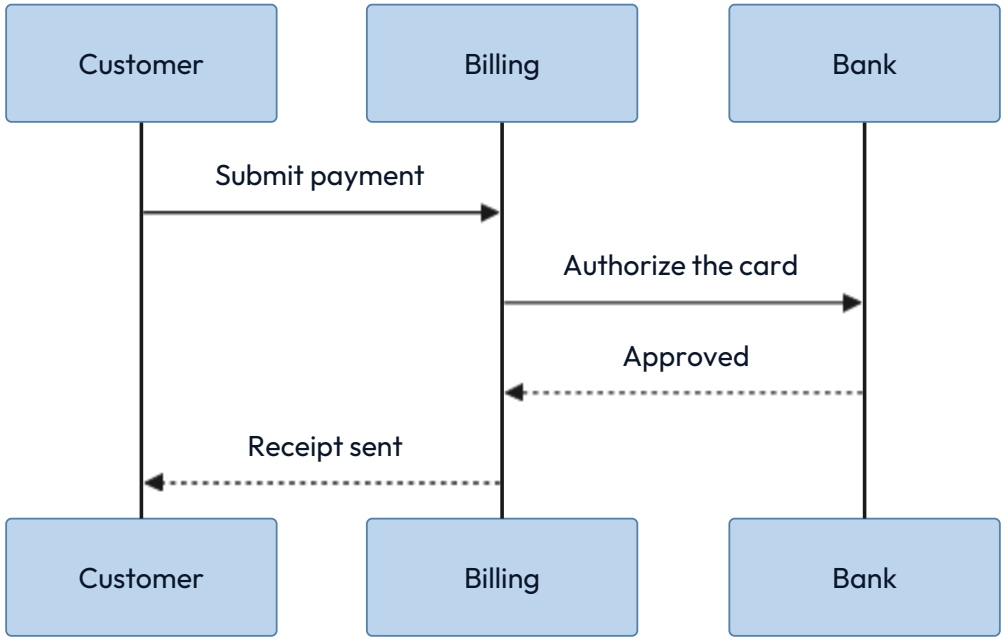

Each label sits whole and centered in its box. Before, every one was clipped to its first few letters.

Approving a change

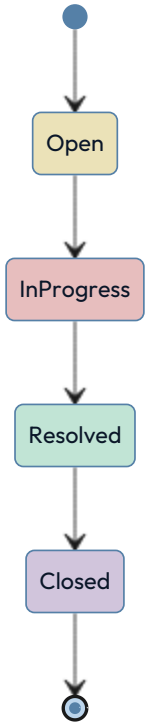

A decision diamond keeps its question inside its outline.

Paying an invoice

A sequence diagram is unchanged: it draws its labels as SVG text, not in a paragraph.

The life of a ticket

State names fit their rounded boxes at the size Mermaid measured them.

Why it happened

Mermaid measures each box at 14px, then wraps the label in a paragraph, and the slide's body-text rule restyled that paragraph at about 21px. A diagram now keeps its own type.