The journey, read top to bottom.

Mood, twice over.

The landscape board is three parallel column-grids; you can't make a stage label group its task rows in CSS. So portrait emits a different shape — and encodes mood redundantly so it survives a glance.

Row wash →

Mood, twice over.

Row wash — pain warm, delight cool. The emotional arc is the first thing you see.

Plotted face →

Plotted face — seated on a pain-to-delight track with a dashed reach to the spine. The exact value, when you look closer.

A `mood=1` task is then unmistakable: a pink row with the face pulled to the edge.

A portrait deck is a different box, not a smaller slide.

THE WIN ISN'T SHRINKING THE JOURNEY TO FIT — IT'S GIVING THE VERTICAL CANVAS ITS OWN COMPOSITION, WHERE THE EMOTIONAL ARC RUNS DOWN THE PAGE AND THE WORST MOMENT IS THE ONE YOUR EYE LANDS ON FIRST.
