split-panel · portrait

The footer reads on either field

In portrait the panels stack. The footer now takes the ink of the field it lands on.

> It made us unable to pretend we had not known.
>
> Head of Product · month five

The footer sits on the white field

It used to keep the panel's white ink: 1.00:1.

Now 5.05:1 at worst, across all 32 themes.

Mirror stacks the other way

The featured panel docks at the bottom, and the footer takes its dark-field ink. Before, this slide stayed side by side and clipped.

> It made us unable to pretend we had not known.
>
> Head of Product · month five

> The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

> The log is the memory the org declined to fund
>
> Decisions were reconstructible from whoever was in the room and still employed.

> The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

Calibration turns opinion into a track record

After two cycles, "I had a feeling" carries a batting average.

> The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

Belief arrived with the second retro

The first produced attendance. The second produced behavior.

The log is the memory the org declined to fund

Decisions were reconstructible from whoever was in the room and still employed.

> The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

Calibration turns opinion into a track record

After two cycles, "I had a feeling" carries a batting average.

The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

Belief arrived with the second retro

The first produced attendance. The second produced behavior.

The framework did not make us smarter. It made us unable to pretend we had not known.

Head of Product · Pilot Team 3 · month five

A long footer holds one line and stops before the page marks.

Split-panel · portrait · long footer

One line, ending in an ellipsis

A 60-character caption used to wrap onto a second line and climb into the content.

A long footer holds one line and stops before the page marks.

Split-panel · portrait · long footer

Clear of the rail

On a split run the footer stops before the k-of-N pills at their widest, on the run's last page.

A long footer holds one line and stops before the page marks.

Split-panel · portrait · long footer

The same cut on every page

The reserve is the run's widest rail, so the caption does not move as the pills fill.

split-panel · portrait

Chrome follows the field under it