Feature · redline narrow form

A redline in a half pane stacks old, new and why

A pane is the one narrow box a wide deck has; the read-across grid now stacks there.

A short amendment, beside its context.

OLD

Two or more designated methods.

NEW

At least one designated method.

WHY

`Floor.` One now suffices.

The floor drops to one method

The homepage link becomes mandatory

The same stack on a dark slide.

OLD

Reports are due within thirty days.

NEW

Reports are due within ten business days.

WHY

Window. The deadline roughly halves.

Finance owns the new deadline

The first report under it lands in March

A split redline in a half pane.

OLD

Two or more designated methods for submitting requests.

NEW

At least one designated method, including a homepage link.

The floor drops to one method

The homepage link becomes mandatory

On a full-width slide the three columns stay side by side.

OLD

Two or more designated methods for submitting requests to opt out.

NEW

At least one designated method, including a homepage link.

WHY

`Floor.` One method now suffices.

`Link.` The homepage label is mandatory.

Old, new, why: the reading order survives the narrow box
