Anchor · Bookend · Prose

title

Opening slide. Dark canvas, centered, no chrome.

anchor · title · the deck's first breath

The title slide opens on the dark canvas.

One heading, an eyebrow, one line of context — centered, chrome-free, quickly gone.

Six stages, six colors

A deck built on a color-coded spectrum.

The title echoes the same six-step story the deck's own components carry.

When NOT to reach for title.

Mid-deck statements

Use `big-number` or `content` for emphatic statements inside a deck. Reaching for the title chrome mid-deck breaks the bookend signal.

Multi-line h1

Keep the h1 to one editorial line. The layout is centered and large — two-line titles get cramped and lose impact.

Header or footer overrides

Don't blank the footer with `_footer: ''` on a title slide. The footer is the deck's standing note (a "Confidential", a copyright), and a cover is where a reader most expects it. Drop it on purpose with `no-footer`, or every band with `silent`.

Related components

See also.

`divider` — mid-deck section breaks — same dark-bookend chrome

`closing` — the final slide — closes the bookend pair