When NOT to reach for pricing.

More than four tiers

Five-plus columns shrink below readability and the price comparison collapses. Curate to the tiers that matter, or use `compare-table` for a dense feature-by-plan matrix.

Every tier marked popular

Elevate exactly one tier. Two ribbons cancel out and the eye has nowhere to land — the whole point of the marker is a single recommendation.

Features that drift between tiers

If each tier lists a different set of features, the columns can't be compared row-for-row. Keep the feature list and order identical; toggle inclusion with `[x]` / `[/]`.

A wall of red 'not included'

Use `[/]` (muted, struck through) for an absent feature, not `[ ]` (alarming empty/fail). A pricing table sells what's included; it shouldn't read as a list of denials.

`compare-table` — a dense feature-by-plan matrix with many rows, not a few highlighted features

`verdict-grid` — options scored on shared criteria, not priced tiers

`cards-grid` — parallel items with no price and no shared feature checklist

`decision` — the slide recommends one option outright rather than presenting a price ladder

`big-number` — a single headline price, not a tiered comparison
