

FEATURE DEMO • GUIDE

A pointer that says more than "over there."

Turn Guide on in Present and read this deck. Each slide is a different shape, and the hand changes what it does to suit it.

THE PROBLEM

A pointer with one verb can only say "this" by going somewhere.

Guide used to move on every sentence, so the eye was dragged on every full stop.

- A hand rests, then names one thing.
- So the gesture fires on a block change.

THE VOCABULARY

Five gestures, chosen by the shape of the thing being named.

01

Underline

One wide, short line of prose. The workhorse, and it lives in the descender gap.

02

Ring

Compact and roughly square: a stat, a chip, a table cell.

03

Wash

A phrase inside a longer block, named without naming the block.

04

Bracket

A whole card or a block read several lines at a time.

05

Tap

Something small and discrete, where a ring would be a dot.

UNDERLINE

This heading is one wide, short line, so the hand sweeps along it.

Watch the stroke: it sits below the baseline, in the descender gap, and the pointer rides it out past the right-hand edge of the column. It never comes to rest on the words it is asking you to read.

RING AND TAP

Compact numbers get a shape drawn around them.

Small, roughly square targets — the case the ring was kept for.

WASH

A paragraph read a clause at a time gets a highlighter, not a circle.

Growth held across every region. Spend stayed disciplined through the second half. The quarter landed on plan with room to spare. Each of those sentences is a phrase inside this block, so the hand washes the words being spoken rather than naming the whole paragraph four times over.

BRACKET

A card is outlined from just outside it.

Rests, then moves

The gesture fires on a new block, never on a full stop.

Fits the shape

Five verbs, picked by geometry rather than at random.

Clears the text

The pointer rides the stroke, so it stops outside what it named.

Follows the deck

Where a slide declares focus, that is what gets named.

Where the deck declares focus, Guide names that row instead.

READ IT WITH GUIDE ON

The hand should fit what it is naming.

Nothing here is authored for Guide. Every gesture on these slides is chosen from the geometry the deck already has.
