comparison

Comparison — how two or more options differ.

Two options, equal footing, corner tags.

THE LEFT OPTION

Each pane holds one option's case in up to twenty words of prose, tagged at the corner.

THE RIGHT OPTION

The panes stay symmetric; a longer case belongs in the vertical variant, not a taller card.

The decision slide names the chosen path.

THE PICK, STATED PLAINLY.

The chosen option leads with the verdict treatment and the reason it won, in one breath.

THE ROAD NOT TAKEN.

The alternative keeps its honest case — a decision against a straw man persuades no one.

The matrix places items on two named axes.

The ceiling of the ladder.

The redline tracks an amendment verbatim.

Cal. Civ. Code §1798.135 · amendment SB-362 (2024)

A business that ~~collects~~ collects, sells, or shares consumers' personal information shall provide ~~two or more~~ at least one designated method for submitting requests to opt-out, including, at minimum, a clear and conspicuous link on the homepage titled "Your Privacy Choices," for use by consumers to ~~opt out of the sale of~~ direct the business not to sell or share their personal information.

> Why this matters. SB-362 collapses sale and sharing into one duty and pins a uniform link title — homepage chrome and DSAR workflows both need a uniform UX.

COMPARISON · SPLIT-COMPARE

The dark panel asks; the grid answers.

One question on the left; two option cards and a verdict on the right.

OPTION A

- Three short rows state the case
- Rows stay parallel across cards

OPTION B

- The grid begs comparison
- Mismatched rows read as bias
