NINTH EDITION · SPRING 2027

Cuoio's inks now step down

Body text, secondary text and the frame used to share one ink. Now each reads a step quieter than the one above it.

THE PROGRAMME · PART ONE

What a visitor walks through

- Twelve installations along four kilometers of the east bank
- A floating stage at the old customs house, open until two
- Night walks led by the artists themselves, free on weekdays

THREE WAYS IN

Come once, or every night

Walk

The riverside route is free and needs no ticket.

Stay

The floating stage sells nightly passes from March.

Make

Twelve workshops with the artists, for ages nine and up.

> We do not light the city. We ask it to be dark for long enough that people look up.

— Mara Okafor, artistic director

PART TWO

The frame stays where it was

Three inks, three steps

- Body text reads 8.5 to 1 on the cream canvas, up from 5.9
- Secondary text, such as this deck's eyebrows and captions, reads 6.5 to 1, up from 5.1
- The header, footer and page number keep their ink at 5.1 to 1

Thank you

The footer below is the same ink it always was. Everything above it is a step darker.
