Deck presets

One word in the front matter sets the bar, the rules, the kicker, the trim and the cards together. This deck runs `preset: editorial` and sets none of those ten keys itself.

One word sets ten settings

`preset:` picks a named look. Each setting it covers still works on its own, and a key you write wins over the preset.

- What a preset sets
 - The brand bar and its edge, card rails, trim, heading rule, eyebrow, headline alignment, card lift and corners.
- What it never touches
 - The theme, color mode, finish, header, footer, logo and language.

Four presets, each different on every slide

Classic

The house default: rainbow bar, quiet trim, a hairline rule, flat cards.

Editorial

A short rule, a bar on the kicker, single-hue trim, lifted cards. This deck.

Brand-forward

The accent everywhere: solid bar, card rails, full trim, an accent rule.

Minimal

No bar, no rule, rounded corners — the content and nothing else.

Brand-forward puts the accent everywhere

Solid bar

Set the theme accent to a client color; the deck follows.

Card rails

Every card carries a rail that follows the bar.

Full trim

Table rails, the timeline spine and code strips take the accent too.

Minimal leaves only the content

DECK PRESETS • PRESET: EDITORIAL

No bar, no heading rule, flat cards and a rounded slide. Use it when the content is the design: a product walkthrough, a screen share, a deck read on a phone.

- Same content, less furniture
 - The layout and the type are unchanged; only the accent and surface details go.

A key you write wins over the preset

```
---
theme: indaco
preset: editorial
rule: none      # everything from Editorial except the heading rule
---
```

The Studio counts these overrides as changes from the preset and offers a Reset back to it.

Basic first, Advanced one tap away

- Basic
 - Preset, theme, color mode, size, page numbers and logo in one short list. A slide shows canvas, type scale, clean slide and its note.
- Advanced
 - Every setting, grouped or listed. The "More..." drawers are gone; their rows sit under plain headings.
- Search
 - Always spans every setting, whichever view is open.
