When NOT to reach for pricing.

More than four tiers

Five-plus columns shrink below readability and the price comparison collapses. Curate to the tiers that matter, or use `compare-table` for a dense feature-by-plan matrix.

Every tier marked popular

Elevate exactly one tier. Two ribbons cancel out and the eye has nowhere to land — the whole point of the marker is a single recommendation.

Features that drift between tiers

If each tier lists a different set of features, the columns can't be compared row-for-row. Keep the feature list and order identical; toggle inclusion with `[x]` / `[/]`.

A wall of red 'not included'

Use `[/]` (muted, struck through) for an absent feature, not `[ ]` (alarming empty/fail). A pricing table sells what's included; it shouldn't read as a list of denials.
