BOARD REVIEW · Q3 2026

Chrome on the navy panel clears AA

The header and footer on indaco's title, divider and closing slides now read clearly on brand navy.

PART ONE

The footer below is the case

What changed on the navy panel

- The header and footer on the title, divider and closing panels take indaco's own panel ink
- They read 4.6 to 1 on brand navy, where they used to read 3.5 to 1
- An author's own chrome color, set with a class, still wins

PART TWO

A page number on the panel

What stayed the same

- On a content slide the header and footer keep their ink, as before
- Every other theme paints its panel near-black, and its chrome is unchanged
- Print mode keeps its own gray chrome

PART THREE

The light divider keeps the canvas ink

Why indaco needed its own ink

- Indaco's panel is brand navy, lighter than its dark canvas
- Its dark muted ink was tuned for the canvas, not for the panel
- Lifting that ink everywhere would have merged it with the secondary ink

Thank you

The footer on this slide is the same line as on every other slide, and now reads on navy.
